The TIM data sessions provide an opportunity for researchers working on empirical interactional data, largely within frameworks such as Conversation Analysis, Ethnomethodology and Interactional Linguistics, to get together regularly to present and discuss audio- and/ or video-recordings of social activities of any kind.

The TIM series is an interdisciplinary initiative and we welcome work-in-progress based on interactional data from different languages and settings, both in institutional and everyday activities.

The language of communication will be English if not stated otherwise.
